

LONGFELLOW CREEK LEGACY TRAIL

Longfellow Creek

Longfellow Creek is a four-mile long urban creek located in West Seattle. Beginning with the headwaters in Roxhill Park, it flows north through the Delridge Valley and into the West Waterway of the Duwamish River. It then flows into Elliot Bay and reaches Puget Sound. As one of the few remaining year-round creeks in Seattle, the creek is a unique and precious natural resource for wildlife habitat and flood control.

Longfellow Creek Legacy Trail A Ribbon of Connection

Connecting the Delridge and Westwood neighborhoods, the Longfellow Creek Legacy Trail links community resources such as the Delridge Library, community centers, schools, parks, human services and businesses. It provides great opportunities for recreation, education and enjoying nature in a pedestrian-friendly urban environment.

Contacts

Schedule creek tours and/or presentations
Longfellow Creek Watershed Council:
206-233-2046 sheryl.shapiro@seattle.gov
www.longfellowcreek.org
Creek Steward Program: 206-684-4613
Camp Long: 206-684-7434
Delridge Neighborhoods Development Association (DNDA): 206-923-0917

Legend

- Trail
- Connecting Trail
- Watershed Boundary
- Creek in Open Channel
- Creek in Pipe
- Information
- Parking
- Rest Room
- ADA Access
- Point of Interest
- Community Center
- School
- Library